- Once a month the students and their closest superior (e.g., pastor/leader) will discuss if, how and when the attained learning can be shared or otherwise used in their church/organisation.
- Once a month the students and their European partner will discuss questions, reflections and the usefulness of the attained learning in their partnership.

Fall semester: Church-Based Leadership

Diakonia - to serve and defend the needy

Description

The students will be introduced to the Biblical background, purpose, concepts and practical application of Diakonia. The teaching will include the context of Diakonia and the role of Diakonia in the mission of God and the life of the church. Students' former experiences and their impressions from being introduced to people involved in the diaconal work of Danish church-based institutions/organisations will be integrated in the lectures

Topics included

- What is diakonia - definition?
- The identity of diakonia
- The history of diakonia
- The context and spirituality of diakonia
- The purpose and expression of diakonia
- Online "visits" to people involved in diaconal work

Learning objectives

The theoretical and theological reflection of the students will be strengthened, as well as their considerations on how diaconal values are to be reflected in the diaconal praxis of their church/organisation. The students will be motivated by the diaconal values and practices they have seen and heard to apply the inspiration and concrete ideas for diaconal work in their church/organisation at home.

Communication

Description

The students will learn important aspects and principles of effective communication as part of good leadership - both one-to-one and with a broader audience. The course will address the issue of dialogue between cultures and faiths, as well as the ability to listen and express own opinions in a non-judgemental way.

Topics included

- Intercultural and non-violent communication/"Giraffe language"
- Interfaith communication (Islam & Christianity)
- Communication with an audience and presentation of your work

Learning objectives

The students will improve their skills in communication on a personal level, which should lead to better understanding and less conflicts. They will also increase their confidence and abilities to present the importance of their work to an audience with potential sponsors or volunteers and to give a short speak or devotion to different age groups.

Organisational Development

Description

The students will learn concepts regarding organisations and partnership and obtain an understanding of phases and objectives in organisational change management. The students will learn to facilitate corporate analysis, reflection and goal-orientation in their local setting and to formulate or reassess the vision and strategy of their organisations.

Topics included

- Partnership, working with volunteers – recruitment & motivation
- Organisational development - organisation, vision, strategy, SWOT, change
- Decision making, accountability, credibility, appreciative inquiry
- Time management and effective meetings, evaluation

Learning objectives

The students will attain strategic skills in facilitating organisational development in their local diaconal/development organisations. This includes abilities to facilitate organisational reflection processes in order to identify concrete measures and actions relevant to their specific organisation. This will empower the students to take on responsibilities of management in order to support their organisation in fulfilling its objectives and reaching its goals.

Value-based Leadership

Description

While organisational development emphasizes the what and how – management and organisation, Value-based Leadership concerns the who and why – the leader and leadership. This subject focuses on values, identity, culture, relationships, personal qualities and skills, along with different perspectives and ways of leadership.

Topics included

- The personal life of a leader

Learning objectives

The students will be more acquainted with the values and ways of leadership in Danish/(European) culture, which can improve the mutual understanding and co-operation between them and their European partners. The students will be inspired to further develop leadership qualities and abilities and to consider how their leadership can be based on diaconal values like servanthood, confidence, openness, integrity and compassion.

Counselling

Description

The course will give an introduction to basic counselling, focusing on the importance of listening and understanding, as well as on asking questions rather than giving answers.

Topics included

- The foundation of Christian counselling
- Active, empathetic listening
- Key points about counselling
- Counselling as a helping relationship

Learning objectives

This subject will increase the abilities of the students to counsel people.

Spring semester: Church-Based DevelopmentGender Perspective on LeadershipDescription*

The course will inspire the students to consider the meaning of gender equality and the significance of translation and interpretation of the Biblical texts on leadership. The teaching will address negative impacts in families, churches and society caused by bias and misinterpretation of Scripture, as well as positive results from a balanced gender perspective on leadership in church and society. The focus will be on how the church can work constructively in the interest of both men and women, encouraging both genders to see each other as allies for positive change.

Topics included

- The importance and benefits of gender equality in family, church and society
- A biblical basis for women preaching and taking senior leadership positions in church
- Dynamics of leadership and culture seen from a gender perspective

Learning objectives

The students will gain an increased understanding of the influence of culture and context on the interpretations of the Biblical texts, especially regarding gender perspective on leadership. Based on a solid theological foundation, both male and female students will know their responsibilities in enhancing more gender balanced roles, resulting in an improvement of the quality of the teaching, as well as the credibility and service of the church.

Project Design*Description*

The focus of this subject is project planning. We use different objective-oriented planning tools, including an adapted version of the Logical Framework Approach (LFA), which is applied by Danish Ministry of Foreign Affairs (DANIDA) and many Danish development organisations. The students learn to facilitate the process of defining, qualifying and formulating a complete written project application following the standards set forth by DANIDA. The course provides an introduction to development theory and discussions about project strategy in order to identify how to enhance the extend of influence of a project.

Topics included

- Defining development, a project and a good development project
- Problem analysis, problem tree, participation analysis, context analysis, objective tree, target group/stakeholder analysis
- Climate changes and sustainable development work
- LFA matrix – objectives, inputs, activities, outputs, indicators, assumptions, sustainability
- Project economy, finance, budget, accounts, receipts, guidelines, checklists, corruption etc.
- Income generating activities and sustainability in projects
- Change triangle and dialogue with authorities - planning, documentation and networks
- Writing application, preparing and performing presentation. Evaluation
- Partnership and cooperation

Learning objectives

The course will expand and nuance the students' understanding of the concept of development. The students will attain the ability to plan, monitor and evaluate development activities on the basis of a comprehensive introduction to all aspects of a typical project cycle. This will provide the students with qualifications to maintain overview of the complex process of clarifying and formulating better and more influential projects.

Introduction to Trauma Healing

Minor subjects taught in both Fall and Spring semester:

Course/Semester Introduction

The students are introduced to DMR, teachers, students, representatives from partnering organisations, as well as course content and Danish culture and society.

Study Techniques

The methods and values of teaching in Denmark will be presented along with our expectations, when it comes to personal assignments, group work and active participation in all lessons. The students will also get to know more about the importance of internet security and the use of Power Point and Excel.

Team Time

Is an informal time where the students can share life and faith and discuss common issues.

Course Reflection

Personal reflection on what is learned and setting goals for how to use the learning in their church/organisation.

Semester Evaluation

Each subject will be evaluated in plenum and through individually written reports. These reports will be sent to the inviting European partner organisations and will be used for adjusting the curriculum. Upon completion of each semester the students must fill in an online evaluation survey to assess their benefit from participating in the course.

Semester Celebration/Graduation

We finish each semester with a celebration or graduation, where your closest superior (e.g., pastor/leader), European partners and your teachers are invited.
